Allison Miller has a huge heart for women and their families. Her mission is to inspire, encourage and empower women to succeed in their personal relationships. She fulfills that mission through partnering with wives of busy executives to restore their marriages through Christ.

She believes understanding your purpose in your relationships, knowing God and oneself, combined with grasping God's true plan for love and marriage, provides the foundation for success in your marriage relationships. She took the long hard road to discover the pathway to true peace, love and joy in relationships. She encourages you to come and learn from her.

Allison is an experienced and insightful coach who offers understanding, but also challenges you to a higher calling. Don't you want to become the woman you were created to be and have the fulfillment of love and joy in your personal relationships you were designed to experience?

Allison is the author of Desperate for Love, a memoir of her first hand experience and freedom from destructive relationships. Through her personal victory she is equipped to help you have healthy relationships and effectively communicate with your loved ones and yourself.

She is an active member at Buckhead Church where she has served on the Women's Steering Committee, as a Women's Group Leader, and led Love Sex & Dating groups. Allison has spoken with several recovery ministries including AIM, ATB and My Sister's House. She also serves as Program Administrator for Lifework Leadership Atlanta.

Allison resides in Atlanta, Georgia and cherishes time with her two grown daughters and their families. She has three grandchildren who she states are her crowning glory.
